a suitcase on standby

The problem with flying to Paris at a moment's notice is that you still have to pack—why not keep a small suitcase that's always ready? This suitcase should hold your travel wallet, shoes and lingerie, a fill bag and a pashmina for the plane. Then cram in your clothes for the hurricane and head to the airport.

PROTECTED UNDERTHINGS

These ladylike shoe bags are also great for lingerie and easy to find in your suitcase—plus, if security opens your bag, you won't have the whole terminal staring at your undies.

ROLLING BAG

We've all had luggage-eyes eyeing buttery leather dual check-in, but the world traveler (and stiletto addict) makes peace with wheels! Opt for a brightly colored model—it's less likely to get lost in a sea of black canvas when you're in a hurry. Or find one small enough to fit in your carry-on board (length, width and depth). This rolling packing case adds up to no more than 45 pounds. $750. TAYLOR MADE
